What Our Prisons Need

THE Ohio penitentiary fire a few weeks ago gave a decided impetus to the movement for more modern, up-to-date prisons, in Ohio and many other states; but now that the memory of the tragedy is growing dim, there is danger that this movement will lag again and that we shall be content to go on in the old way.

Therefore, it is timely to quote a few paragraphs from a report made by a German commission which made a tour of inspection of American prisons a few years ago. This report ought to be studied all over America. Consider the following, for instance:

"The erection of high walls, watch towers, inside cells and large cell blocks can perhaps prevent the escape of prisoners, though escapes do occur ever and again from these old walled monsters. But that is only a negative result which can be attained much more efficiently through less material means.

"We still labor under the delusion that society can be protected by the mere isolation of prisoners in single cells and by mechanical safety devices such as barred windows, watch towers and high walls. Such a conception must be utterly discarded. It puts out of the question the only treatment that is of any real value—educational work with the individual prisoner.

"Harsh and unyielding measures were once employed in our mental hospitals, where they have since been supplanted by psychological methods that seek to lead the patient back to health through a process of re-education. That our prisons should follow the same course admits of no question.

"The more a prison depends upon force in its physical features and its methods of treatment, the stronger will be the impulses toward rebellion and defiance of authority, the tendencies toward instability and an unbridled indulgence of appetites, that will be released upon discharge.

"Therefore, away with monster institutions. There should be not more than 300—at the very most, 500 prisoners. A large prison must of necessity be conducted on a system of mass treatment and mass discipline. At best it can only be smoothly running machine which compels the prisoner's obedience while he is in the institution, but which makes no attempt to prepare him for a life of freedom."

All of this needs study. Perhaps many Americans will not be willing to go all the way with this report; but at any rate we can ponder over it to advantage. Our present system, quite obviously, is full of bad defects.

A Lesson Learned in '76

A GOOD many Americans have already commented on the interesting parallel between the present upheaval in India and the unrest in America in 1776 which led to the winning of independence.

Now, however, comes the report of England's famous Simon commission, to make the contrast between the two cases even more interesting.

The report of this commission is evidence of the way in which the English ruling class has been able to learn by experience. Up to a certain point, the cases of America in 1776 and India in 1930 are parallel; but with the report of the Simon commission they cease to be parallel and follow divergent lines. And this, probably, is a good reason for believing the winning of independence by the Americans will not be further duplicated by the winning of independence by the Indians.

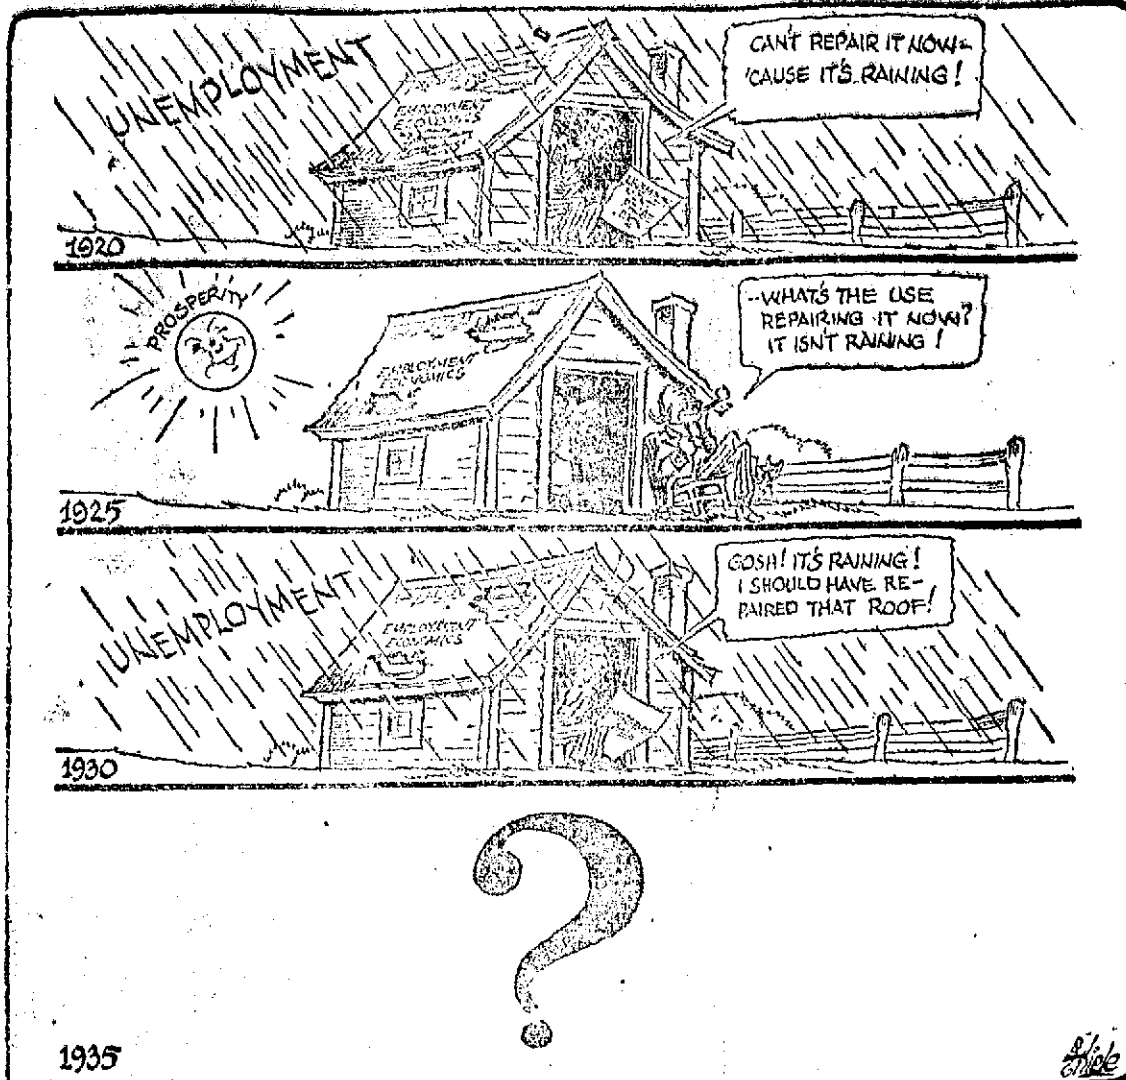

This Simon report is a conciliatory, liberal document. It recommends that India be given self-government. Full dominion status—which would satisfy Gandhi completely—is held up as the goal. To be sure, the commission does not believe India is quite ready for dominion status. It points out that castes and religious differences divide India's enormous population so thoroughly as almost to make co-operation in self-government impossible. But it paves the way for granting all that the Indian nationalists ask, and if the British government will set some definite date for putting a new regime into effect its troubles very likely will end.

Contrast that with the reception that a former government gave to unrest in the American provinces. There was no commission sent over to study the situation and propose conciliatory measures. Not one in authority dreamed of making any serious concessions to the colonists. Instead, troops and warships were sent over, officered by a singularly dund-headed group of leaders who could be counted on to be quite as tactless as anyone could ask.

The result was that a set of grievances which could easily have been settled were magnified—and independence was won by force of arms.

The British have learned from that episode. They are not following the same course in India. They are ready to use force, but they are also eager to try conciliation. Consequently, one may assume that India will remain within the empire.

WASHINGTON.—The Sheppard-Towner Maternity and Infancy Act, a piece of legislation which always seemed to interest the women of the country more than any other, is likely to stay dead indefinitely as the result of a misunderstanding or something between Congress and the White House.

That is the law under which the government appropriated more than a million dollars a year to co-operate with the states in welfare and hygiene work for mothers and babies, under the administration of the Children's Bureau. The act ran for seven years and everyone seemed to agree that the work was a great success, striking at the mother and infant mortality rates, but it stopped on July 1 of last year when Congress failed to appropriate the money to keep it going.

Not Getting Anywhere

Women's organizations thought it was fine business to have a "child welfare president" like Mr. Hoover. Now some of their officers are complaining privately that the president has taken such an active interest in the problem that things are getting all balled up without any progress.

After he had announced his White House Conference on Child Health and Child Protection the word went to Capitol Hill that the president didn't want any action on the Sheppard-Towner measure before the conference made a report, which would take a year or more.

Nevertheless, in his message to the regular session of Congress Mr. Hoover declared himself in favor of continuing the Sheppard-Towner Act under the Children's Bureau for a limited period of years and Congressman Cooper of Ohio and Senator Jones of Washington introduced bills which would provide money to start the thing going again.

But Cooper says Mr. Hoover made subsequent demands concerning the legislation and he introduced a second bill to square with the presidential ideas. This bill would transfer maternity and infant hygiene work to the U. S. Public Health Service. The women complain, however, that it gives no assurance that real practical work would be carried on.

The Public Health Service has never done any maternity work, whereas the Children's Bureau has been engaged in it for many years. And the theory of those who will have none of the second Cooper bill is that in order to reduce the baby death rate the mothers who need education must receive it.

During the flood relief work the president became very fond of the county health unit and his idea lately has been that these should be used in future administration of the Sheppard-Towner Act. There are, however, good reasons why many counties which have no such units, Minnesota, for instance, is said to have but one county health unit.

Under the second Cooper bill the Children's Bureau would have money to carry on welfare work, but the nature of such work is not defined.

Besides representatives of women's organizations, those of organized labor and the American Farm Bureau Federation have joined in opposing the bill which was inspired by the president.

They are all supporting a bill recently submitted by Congressman Goodwin of Minnesota which would simply re-enact the Sheppard-Towner law and provide some money.

SON'S PAY CUT, Takes Poison

OSAKA, Japan, June 11.—(UP)—When her son's wages were reduced an aged Japanese woman attempted to commit suicide here.

The case, reflecting the stark tragedy gripping thousands of Japanese homes as the result of the present business depression, was brought to the attention of the authorities when Mrs. Iwajiro Nomura, 75 years old, was treated at the Osaka hospital after taking poison.

She said her son, employed in a spinning mill, was trying to support a family of five on a monthly wage of 25 yen ($17.50).

Recently the mill was forced to reduce wages 20 per cent, and the aged woman, believing that her son would find it impossible to feed and clothe the entire family under the new conditions, decided to commit suicide.

Hospital attendants declared she would recover.

Western New York Uses Moth and Candle Principle

GENEVA, N. Y., June 12.—(UP)—Making use of the moth and candle principle, western New York horticulturists are experimenting with illumination as a lure for fruit pests.

The electrically lighted traps have proved particularly effective in reducing the ravages of bud moths and leaf rollers.

Experiments with this method of pest extermination are being conducted by Donald L. Collins, entomologist at the state experiment station, and Maurice W. Nixon, rural service engineer, an electrical power company.

They have also tried charging screen doors with electricity to eradicate stable flies. High tension static current, harmless to humans but fatal to flies, is employed.

passed a Civil Service examination for patron and seamstress. She will receive a government appointment at $1,080 a year.

How Jaunita fought her way to education in the face of the tribal determination of the Santo Domingo Pueblo Indians to maintain their aboriginal manner of life was related by Interior Department officials.

These Indian Pueblos have tribal self-government, and the United States has hesitated to intrude its authority. Santo Domingo has been more determined than any of the others to continue its tribal identity.

When Jaunita took ninth grade work at a secular academy in Santa Fe so she might enter a hospital and become a nurse, her people so vigorously opposed the program that she returned to the reservation.

One of the secret ceremonial dances, which white men may attend, celebrated this homecoming.

But her thirst for knowledge continued. She became housekeeper at the day school, and worked at this for two years. Then she took matters into her own hands, defied her tribe, and ran away to enter a school at Albuquerque.

She has been at this school for four years. Her examination papers on file in Washington are written in a tiny copper-plate hand that would do credit to any Vassar graduate. Government authorities say she discourses on the care of living quarters, on sanitation, on diet, on the making of clothing, as might an instructor in home economics.

Three Day Engagement "Big Pond" Ends Today

Claudette Colbert speaks perfect Parisian French without a trace of English accent.

Manrice Chevallier, Parisian of Parisians, is the authority for this statement.

And Claudette Colbert speaks English without a trace of French accent, as millions of stage and screen theatre-patrons who have seen and heard her will admit.

The explanation of this unusual bilingualism is that Miss Colbert was born in France and lived there until she was in her early teens. Then she came to America with her parents and attended schools here until she made her stage debut a few years ago. In the intervening years she mastered English without acquiring any suggestion of French accent.

Her complete mastery of the two languages provided her with the unusual opportunity of playing the leading feminine role opposite the leading masculine role in "The Big Pond," in which "the big happiness man from Paris" is starring at the Saenger theatre last time tonight.

Says Hubby Cost Her 142 Pounds

From a comfortable poundage of 512 to a mere sylph of 370 was the heart-breaking loss of Mrs. Viola Barton, and all because a cruel husband constantly nagged her and threatened to strike her, she told the judge in Los Angeles divorce court. This picture shows Mrs. Barton as she now appears, having wasted away to the extent of 142 pounds.

Boy Climbs Tree and Suffers Severe Shock

MAGNOLIA, June 12.—Billie Bennett, aged 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Bennett of this city, narrowly escaped with his life last Friday at noon when he met with a shock of electricity in a tree which had electric wires running through the limbs. The tree was wet from a recent rain.

The boy, who had climbed the tree, fell about 15 feet to the ground when shocked. When his mother reached him he was unconscious and rigid. His skin was of a bluish tinge and his eyes were set.

He regained consciousness in about an hour and virtually has recovered, but has blisters in his hands and legs. It is not known whether he touched a charged wire or whether the tree was electrified. His father had left a few hours earlier for New Mexico, but as the son rapidly improved, the father was not notified.

Bible School Has An- other Splendid Crowd

A big day was enjoyed at the Bible school, being conducted at the Presbyterian church today. All children were especially attentive.

Tomorrow is the last day and every child is expected and urged to be in their place. Some surprises are in store for them.

Parents are invited to attend tomorrow's session. A review of the work done will be held from 11 to 11:30, showing what has been accomplished in the various departments.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 12.—(UP)— Widely divergent views on the purposes of marriage and benefits of a college education were expressed by members of the senior graduating class at Southwestern University in a poll conducted by authorities.

Seven members would marry for money, they asserted in the questionnaire. Other qualifications are of prime importance, the other graduates voted.

Two members opined that a college education is a bad investment.
In the order named, Jesus Christ,
Napoleon, Socrates, Thomas A. Edison and William Shakespeare were voted as the greatest men of all time.

Woodrow Wilson was named, with few exceptions, as the greatest American of all time, while Thomas Edison was signalled as the greatest living American, according to the poll.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

by William Braucher

How Are the Mighty Fallen? It has been a year since Howie Ehmke was a great man. He pitched the winning game in a world series. His surprising pitching may be the factor that turned the tide for the Reds in the first game in Chicago.

Now Connie Mack says Howard Ehmke is a complete failure. But the asking of questions on Ehmke has a deeper significance than merely marking the passing of a man who no longer can make the grade. It means that Connie Mack realizes that he is facing a fight to hold the top of the American League this year with the pitching staff as it was in 1929.

Sam Jones Testifies

An inquiring reporter asked Sam Jones the other day if he believed the Senators, for whom Sam pitched a couple of innings, could stand up to the Athletics. Sam answered affirmatively.

"The second division clubs are the ones that are hard for us to beat," said Sam Samuel.

"But those Mack pitchers—aren't they pretty tough?"

"How?" was the reply Jones made to this question. "Three pitchers are not enough. Grove, Barnshaw and Walberg are good, but Mack needs more. And it looks like Connie can't even depend on these three. Grove won't stand any overwork. Barnshaw hasn't been going this year. Neither has Walberg. You have to have five or six regular pitchers who are good enough to win ball games. Washington has got the Athletics haven't?"

Which throws new light on Sam's asking of waivers on Ehmke. Mr. Gilliland, realizing that he got to pick-up a couple of pitchers.

The Trade Winds

SNAP judgment seems to indicate that John McGraw and Bucky Harris got much the best of their recent trades. McGraw gave Larry Benton and Pat Crawford for Pete Donohue, Ethan Allen and Hughie Critz. Bucky Harris gave Harry Rice, Owen Carroll and "Weenie" Wuestling for Walte Hoyt and Mark Koenig. But what appears to be a benefit may turn out to be just another kick in the pants.

Donohue and Benton look to be an even trade. That makes it appear that Critz and Allen have been traded for Pat Crawford, a sissy man who is a good hitter,

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

THERE used to be quite a few Temperamental Tosses in the big leagues, guys who would get mad when their support wobbled behind them and who would thereafter grove the old apple and let come what may. These lads are few and far between nowadays, but there are two we can think of. One is Walte Hoyt, traded the other day to the Tigers. The other is Wesley Ferrell, the Indian pitcher who was a sensation last year in his first big league season when a player boots one behind him, Ferrell pounds the ball into his glove angrily. Some great pitchers we can think of never exhibited any signs of this peevishness. Grover Alexander just pitched in there all the time, giving his best, no matter how many boners are made behind him. Urban Faber is another like Alex. Stan Coveleskie was the hardest guy to ruffle you ever saw. Once an umpire framed a strike on him when Covey was at bat. The ball was two feet wide of the plate, the story goes, and the catcher had to lunge to grab it when the umpire called "Strike one!" Covey never even turned around.

Jack of all trades and master of none. It seems to be a great bargain for McGraw, who badly needed a man like Critz, but we are going to wait and see what Dan Howley does with Pat Crawford before passing judgment on the deal finally.

Howley took a seventh place St. Louis Browns team, bought one-way tickets for 17 of its players and wound up in the first division the following year. Dan doesn't go around with his eyes closed.

Gift Horses?

AS for the other trade, I don't place overweening faith in either Hoyt or Koenig. The former is cursed with a sulking temperament. Koenig has been a great ball player, but now is having lots of trouble with his eyes. Harry Rice is a fine ball player, and what Owen Carroll will develop into with as able a coach as Bob Shawkey to guide him may surprise those who think Harris got the best of the bargain.

resents the maximum of students who can be competently taught there.

Uniform Draws Many Requests

Reserve Officer Serves In Many Different Capacities

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 11.—(UP)—He was offered a dime tip for giving highway information. He was asked by an elderly woman the direction to a cloak room in a hotel. A woman boarded the street car and placed her carfare in his hands. Motorists have sought his permission to park on downtown thoroughfares.

But those are only a few of the many instances in which the uniform of Major M. Crawford, Jr., in charge of the Organized Reserves in Memphis, has been mistaken for that of bellboy, traffic cop, and conductor.

fully dealt with.

"That judge says foul," Jacobs yelled at Crowley, and then, turning to the other seconds in his corner, he raised his voice to a shrill squawk. "Don't let him out of that corner," he commanded. "Keep him on the stool. He was fouled and they are trying to get away with it."

Sharkey retired to his corner and with the heavyweight championship and its million dollar value slipping away from him in the comedy of the 24-foot square, his demeanor was a startling contrast with his shrieking, cursing hysteria of that night in Miami four months ago, when he fouled Fainting Philip Scott of England, but won nevertheless. Sharkey stood stately and composed, although gnawing at his upper lip. In a few seconds more the fight was over and, with Jacobs still screaming for his million-dollar prize, Crowley decided to concur with Barnes.

Doctor Finds Injury
Doctor William Walker, the officiating physician, a brother of Mayor James J. Walker, examined Schmeling in his dressing room soon after his retirement and said he had found a definite spasm of the left scrotum, leading him to believe that the finishing punch was low.

There have been only three important heavyweight prize fights since last Christmas and all of them were marred by claims of foul. Otto von Porat fouled "Fighting" Philip Scott in the Garden ring last December with $90,000 worth of trade on hand. Sharkey fouled Scott in Miami two months later with a gate of $190,000 but won.

DANCING JUDITH

by CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
VINCENT STORNAWAY, successful portrait painter, taken BRUCE GIDEON, wealthy financier, to the picturesque Cafe Ture in Greenwich Village to show him the bohemian life of the world of artists. There he introduces him to JUDITH GRANT, beautiful artist's model and dancer, and her friend, CHARISSA MORLEY, known as Chummy, and tells him of Chummy's tragic history. Seven years ago Chummy had loved ALAN STEYNE, an artist. Steyne had abruptly disappeared and the shock had unhinged Chummy's mind, so that she had been childish in her mental processes ever since. Chummy lives with Judith, who looks after her and supports her. After the two men leave the cafe, BASTIEN DUMONT, another artist, tells Judith that Steyne has come back to New York, and the two arrange a meeting between Steyne and Chummy. Chummy falls to recognize Steyne, however, and Steyne, after giving Judith some money to help care for the girl, takes his leave, telling Judith he hopes to see her again soon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER III

THE next day, about noon, Judy and Bastien Dumont met in the Cafe Ture. Judy had been sitting for the famous Max Dickbreed, a rather irritable individual. She was exhausted, and had come for a cup of coffee and some sandwiches made of Italian sausage that Dan always prepared for her.

Dumont had a glass of beer before him. He said he had lunched—which did not necessarily mean that he had.

"Do you really think he will marry her?" he asked.

"Of course he will marry her!" the girl replied indignantly. "What else could he do? He will pay doctors to make her well, and then he will marry her. If the doctors can't make her well, he will marry her all the same."

"Did he say so?"

"Of course—I mean, it wasn't necessary. He gave me money for her—to spend on nice things. He is going to take her away."

"Did he say so?"

"Of course he must, Bastien. Why should she stay where she is? He is rich, isn't he?"

"I don't think he's exactly rich, but he's well off. He told me about it. When he left here, he was in despair and half dotty for lack of food. He made his way to Italy with a man he knew, and thought he might make a living by copying old masters. There he fell in with an old gentleman, a rich art collector, who took a fancy to him and made him his secretary. They traveled all over the world. The old man died six months ago and left Steyne very comfortably off. I don't think he left him everything he had, but it was quite enough to keep the wolf from the door."

Judy clasped her hands.

"How absolutely gorgeous for Chummy!" she breathed. "And, Bastien, he is awfully nice!"

"Easy enough to be nice when you've got money," mumbled Dumont. "Easy to keep young, too. I'm getting near 30, Judy, and in a few years I shan't be young any more; but there's Alan Steyne, looking like a boy, so fresh and fit—and he's older than I am!"

"Don't you think you'd better call in some other doctor?" the girl asked.

"Oh, Lord, hark at Methusalem!" cried Judy. "Why, sometimes I feel 90. Bastien, you silly owl! And sometimes I feel 16. Actually, I'm 23. That's getting old for a girl, too, you know."

Dumont closed his eyes for a moment with a look of pain. Then he looked at the girl, his face drawn with miserable yearning.

"I wish I could do any kind of work that would make me famous and rich," he said feverishly. "Then perhaps you'd listen to me, Judy. I can't expect you to now, although if you'd only marry me I'd work like a plowboy. I'd simply make them take my work and pay for it, and at least you wouldn't have to slave."

Judy shook her head, and her bright hair glittered under her hat. "I've told you lots of times, Bastien, that I'm never going to marry until I fall in love. Falling in love must be jolly, and it may make it worth while getting married. From what I've seen of marriage, it wants something pretty strong to make it worth while!"

A WEEK passed, and Chummy's cold did not get better. She developed a troublesome cough, and her cheeks began to look transparent. Judy was worried, particularly as Alan Steyne did not come again.

Max Dickbreed was painting Judy as a Spanish dancer in a sensational work for the Paris salon, and he changed her pose every day. He was a clever artist, but his personality was devastating. Judy could not have put it into words, but he fed on other people's vitality and reduced her, as she said, to a rag.

Judy went for the doctor. He was a queer Irishman with red hair and fiery eyes. His name was 'Shane, and he ran a dispensary for the poor.

He was not very encouraging about Chummy. He said she wanted warmth and cuddling, and plenty of nourishing food.

Judy bought many little delicacies out of Alan Steyne's gift. Doctor O'Shane had attended Chummy before. As he was leaving, he said to Judy, on the landing:

"I think her brain's going. She's more childish than she was."

It was that same day that Chummy started her friend by saying suddenly:

"I feel so queer, Judy! I think something's going to happen to me. It's a horrible feeling, like a lot of brass bands playing in my head!"

Judy sought Dumont. He was her confident, the one person on whom she could rely. She made him promise to go and see the doctor and tell him all about Chummy.

They met again at the Cafe Ture in the evening.

"Well?" the girl asked breathlessly.

"O'Shane doesn't think anything could be done," he answered. "If she didn't know Steyne at once, he doesn't believe she will ever know him. He says there's no treatment that could cure her. He was rather decent for him; tried to explain the case to me."

Judy was in despair.

"Has Steyne called again?" Dumont asked.

"No."

"Did he say he would?"

"Yes—I mean, Chummy invited him. Oh, Bastien, that night he was so nice to her! I thought him simply perfect. What can be the matter? Why doesn't he come?"

DUMONT had no answer. In his own mind he could think of several reasons. He had not Judy's unshakable faith in humanity—which was indeed something to marvel at, considering how much she had seen of life.

Steyne did come a couple of evenings later. He came laden with fruit and flowers, and to Judy he was like a day in spring. His absence was easily accounted for. He had to go to Maine on business connected with the property his late benefactor had left him.

He came several times that week. Chummy was delighted with him in her placid, "take-everything-for-granted" way. She ordered him about just as she did Judy; but not even his repeated visits struck a single chord of her lost memory.

Judy spoke to Steyne about the doctor one night, as he was leaving. Chummy had not been able to go out yet. The two stood on the landing. Chummy's room was only the pretense of a sitting room, because the bed was hidden behind a rickety screen.

"Don't you think you'd better call in some other doctor?" the girl asked.

There was a note of impatience in her voice. Evidently she was feeling the strain of this unnatural position. Alan Steyne sitting and chatting to Chummy as if they had just met and made friends, and Chummy smiling unaware that her heart belonged to him by his side—it was a spectacle that got on Judy's nerves.

"It's taking such a time!" she went on. "Aren't there better doctors than O'Shane? Can't something be done to make her memory come back and to make her know you? And she's been feeling queer lately. She's told me so. Oh, do something, Mr. Steyne! It must be dreadful for you—this waiting. It's driving me silly—what must it be doing to you?"

Alan Steyne did not answer immediately. He was looking at Judy. As she gazed at him in her perplexity on behalf of her friend, his eyes held hers, and she found herself flushing hotly and angrily as she realized that at that moment the condition of poor Chummy was far from his mind.

She looked away, furious and ashamed at her own embarrassment. Steyne took her hand.

"Good night, little guardian," he said. "Of course, I'll be only too glad to get another opinion, but I'll see this man O'Shane first."

The result was that a famous specialist came to see Chummy, in consultation with the Irish doctor. He did not give much hope. He said just what Doctor O'Shane had said. There was no treatment to be prescribed. It could only be left to nature. It was quite possible that Miss Morley might recover her memory, but there were no means known to science which could accelerate the process.

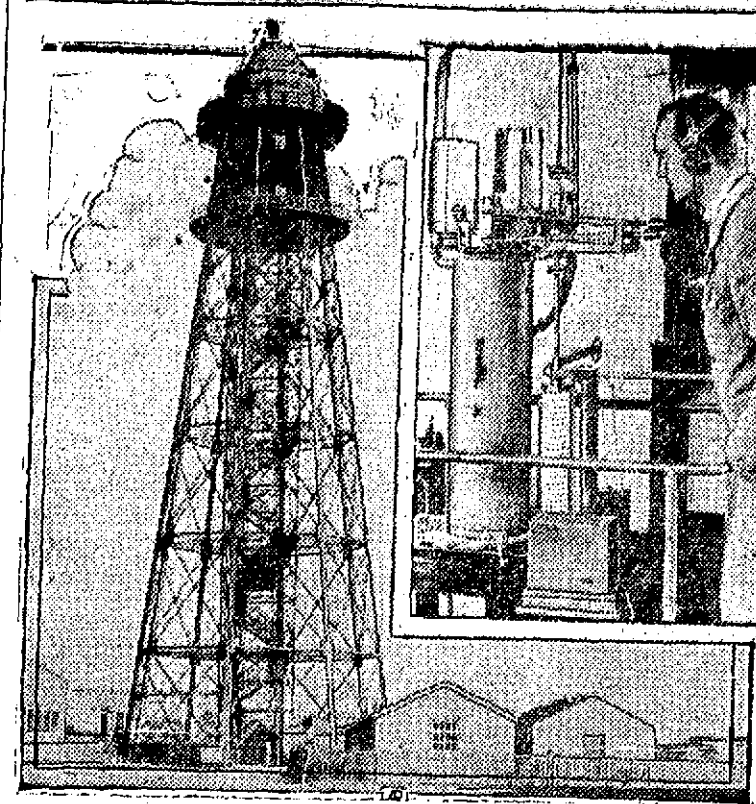

"So you're just where you were," said Dumont, when Judy told him at the Cafe Ture on the same night.

"Yes, except that of course Mr. Steyne will take Chummy away now. Her cold's almost well. She wanted to come with me tonight, but I was afraid."

The young artist said nothing.

World's Finest Airport to House Giant Dirigibles at Cardington

World's greatest airport being built at Cardington. Mooring mast for dirigibles (left). Instrument for measuring direction of wind and velocity at top of mast (right).

CARDINGTON, Eng. June 6.—(P)—Plans are underway to make this Bedfordshire town the most important international airport in the world. It is to be the pivot of the trans-Atlantic airship services being organized in Germany, England and the United States.

The Graf Zeppelin is to have a shed here and it will be the home port for the fleet of dirigibles planned by England of which the R-100 and R-101 are the forerunners. It is expected that the huge airships now planned in the United States will also make Cardington their British terminal.

Meanwhile, England is going ahead with plans for the R-102. She will be bigger and faster than either of the two existing British airships. Her plans are already in the hands of the designers. By the time she is completed Cardington will be the biggest airship port in the world.

The airport will have the latest scientific instruments such as television equipment for broadcasting pictures of weather maps to airships.

Blind Youth, 14, Leads His Class

By NEA Service
CHARLESTON, W. Va.—Blind Albert Good, 14, is the valedictorian of the spring graduation class of the Roosevelt Junior high school here.

When he was 10 years old a playmate fired an arrow which struck Albert in the eye, blighting it.

Two years later a splintered baseball bat hit him in the face destroying the other eye.

Albert's parents entered him in a Philadelphia school for the blind, where he learned the Braille system of writing.

Then he returned to school in Charleston, taking notes in Braille. His tests were given orally.

Mrs. R. S. Good, his mother, was his coach and counselor. She read his assignments to him.

He plans to enter college and become a lawyer.

Britons Plan Motor Exhibit

Society To Assemble Collective Display For Show In 1931

LONDON, Eng., June 12.—(UP)—The Society of British Motor Manufacturers is now planning a collective exhibit to be entered in the British Empire Trade Exhibition to be held in Buenos Aires in 1931. The recent provisional booking of 70,000 feet of space for the proposed exhibition is indicative of the interest being shown by the motor car industry.

The booking of the space by the motor car manufacturers resulted from a conference between the leaders of the industry and J. H. Thomas, the Lord Privy Seal. It is believed that the motor car entry will show the development of the industry from the very beginning.

Brian Bellasis in speaking of the progress of the exhibition says "All now being made are but the finishing touches to what, even at this stage, would be an extraordinary demonstration of the magnitude of the British Empire."

Bans Fireworks On July Fourth

Only Smallest Pieces Allowed Inside Borders of State

MADISON, Wis., June 13.—(UP)—The day has passed in Wisconsin when father can give an exhibition with Roman candles and skyrockets in front of the house on the Fourth of July. A new fireworks law, designed to protect the small boy and the general public, will govern its first Independence Day this year.

The statute appears destined to deprive both father and son of fun which has been a customary part of the day's celebration in the past. To offset that fact, legislators who enacted the law argued that it also would cut down the day's casualties.

A permit from the city mayor, village president, or town chairman is necessary before Roman candles may shoot their colored bursts of fire, or skyrockets go sizzling through the air. Even then they must be discharged in an open field or on the water.

Failure to enforce the new law constitutes grounds for removal of officials charged with that duty. Such officials may require a $5,000 bond of the person or organization sponsoring the special fireworks display as insurance against personal or property damage.

Toy pistols, cannons, or other contrivances using explosive caps or cartridges, and any Chinese firecrackers more than two inches in length and three-eighths inch in diameter are banned from sale, manufacture, or importation into the state. Even the distance which pin wheels may throw their fire is restricted.

Any person who sells unpermitted fireworks is held responsible by this law for any damage they may do. Likewise a father is personally liable for damage caused by his boy's fireworks if they are of the forbidden type.

Violation of any provision of the new law is subject to fine of $10 to $500, imprisonment from 30 days to six months in jail, or both.

Try To Break Flight Records

Will Start and Finish At Jacksonville, Florida

DETROIT, June 13.—(AP)—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee took off for Jacksonville, Fla., at 10:25 a. m. (E. S. T.) Thursday flying the plane in which they hope to shatter three transcontinental flight records.

The starting and finishing points of the record flight attempts will be Jacksonville. The fliers planned to make an over-night stop at Columbia, Ark., arriving at Jacksonville, Friday. They were accompanied by Roy Newton, mechanic.

The plane in which Brock and Schlee will attempt to break the records has been put through extensive tests here and at various mid-west airports.

According to the plans for the flight the fliers will take off from Jacksonville at dawn with San Diego, Calif., their objective. They hope to turn to Jacksonville at dawn following day, thus making the round trip transcontinental flight in 24 hours. If successful, they will have broken eastward, westward and round trip records.

Pulmotor Saves Life Of Woman

Supposed To Have Taken Over Dose of Headache Medicine

ATLANTA, Tex., June 13.—The life of Mrs. Walter Goodroe, 27, was probably saved here Thursday afternoon with a pulmotor rushed from Texas in an East ambulance after neighbors found her on the brink of death as the result of an overdose of headache medicine.

A perilous trip from Texas to Atlanta, a distance of about 28 miles, was negotiated by the East ambulance carrying the pulmotor in about 25 minutes. The ebb of life left in the body of the woman was stopped with the pulmotor in artificial respiration work by ambulance attendants.

Although the woman regained consciousness several hours later, physicians said Thursday night the condition of the woman remained critical. The drug was believed completely extracted from her stomach.

Contents of the compound taken by the woman had not been determined, physicians declaring that the only evidence that she had taken a drug having come from relatives, who said she had been taking a headache remedy.

Not To Question Cannon, Is Vote

Political Activity of 1928 Not To Be Asked of Bishop

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP)—The dramatic controversy between Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and the senate lobby committee was officially ended Thursday when the investigators agreed they would not compel him to answer questions about his 1928 anti-Smith activities and voted to submit a report to the senate.

By a four to one vote the committee agreed not to require the bishop to answer questions and later during a two-hour session behind closed doors, decided to submit to the senate a transcript of the examination of the churchman.

Senator Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, contended that when the report is made to the senate the vice-president is required by law to submit to the district attorney the fact that Cannon refused to answer questions and that the district attorney is required to lay the matter before a grand jury.

A directly opposite view was taken however, by Chairman Caraway, who explained the committee had ruled that it had no power to ask the questions, and, therefore, the Southern Methodist churchman had not legally declined to answer.

Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, expressed the opinion that nothing could be done until someone raised the question in the senate as to the relevancy of the questions asked Cannon.

Two proposals for further action against the bishop were voted down at the executive session. A motion by Senator Walsh to ask the senate for specific authority to inquire into political activities was defeated three to two while a proposal by Senator Blaine to cite the bishop to the senate for possible contempt proceedings received only one vote.

Walsh and Blaine favored the first proposal while Blaine cast the only vote for his motion.

Just because you can see no dirt in a just does not mean that it is clean. You cannot see germs.
